This point is explored through a consideration of four processual ethical structures, each of which can constitute a point of reference for the exercise of a responsibility. Ethically Structured Processes questions dualities that are very firmly established in the West, such as "theoretical/practical" and "descriptive/prescriptive", through a detour into historical Chinese traditions of thought.

Summary: Looming trade wars and rising nationalism have stirred troubling memories of the 1930s. Will history repeat itself? Do we face the chaotic breakdown of the global economic system in the face of stagnation, protectionism and political tumult? Jeremy Green argues that, although we face grave problems, globalization is not about to end. Setting today's challenges within a longer historical context, he demonstrates that the global economy is more interconnected than ever before and the costs of undoing it high enough to make a complete breakdown unlikely. Popular analogies between the 1930s and today are misleading. But the governing liberal ideology of globalisation is changing.

Summary: Family is a fascinating subject, particularly in India, where family law differs from community to community. The Hindus, the majority community, has its own personal law; so have the Muslims, the largest minority community. The other minority communities such as Christians, Parsis, Jews have their own personal law. What today we have come to designate as "Hindus" for the purpose of application of Hindu law are four religions - Jains, Sikhs and Buddhists and of course Hindus. Though theologically they are separate religions but law has been integrated so as to apply uniformly to the followers of these religions.

Law being dynamic some long awaited changes have been brought about, some by legislature some by judicial interpretations: Law of adoption in India is still not a uniform civil code in the sense it is available to only the majority community. Amongst Hindus also it evolved due to immense importance attached to son so the idea behind pre-Act law of adoption was only to provide son to a sonless father. Therefore a daughter could not be adopted. The post-Act law has been "secularized" in the sense that a girl could now also be adopted.
